INSURANCE Against Losses or damage by Fire.

THE propriety of being infured against Loss by Fire is obvious to every person. The secarity arising to individuals meeting with that awful calamity, by recovering their loss for a small consideration, is sound to be attended with the happiest consequences. When a fire happens where houses are crowded together, much loss arises from the newcessary removal of furniture, See, which alone is a sufficient to insure.

cellary removal of furniture, e.e. which alone is a numerous indicement to infure.

With a view to prevent money from going out of the country, a number of Scots Geatlemen in different towns fome time ago crecked a new infurance-office, under the firm of The Dundee Infurance-Office against Loss or Damage by Fire.—The fecurity to the public, from the number of partners conjoined, must be undoubted; and, to recommend the Office to the paronage of the country, the most liberal treatment may always be depended on.

Those already insured, who may chuse to favour this Office, will receive a new policy and ticket gratis.

Orders for insurance are received by David Blairy at the Company's Office in Dundee; by DAVID PATERSON, AT HIS INSURANCE-OFFICE IN MILN's SQUARE, EDINBURGH; and by the Company's agents in most of the principal towns in Scotland; from whom persons applying may receive a copy of the principal course.

FROM THE LONDON PAPERS, Dec. 15. Florence, Nov. 17. By letters from Pescia, of the 6th of this month, we are advised of the death of a person, eclebrated and highly esteemed both in London, where he relided in the younger part of his life, and in Tuscany, his native country. This is the Sieur Guiannini, who was equally distinguished for his humane disposition and undeviating integrity. Having proved unsuccessful in his commercial pursuits, left he should eventually injure those with whom he had dealings, he relinquished trade, and applied himself to the cultivation of science. He opened a school, where he instructed the poor gratis, in geometry, algebra, and the French lan-

Gratz, Nov. 18. We learn from Gnas, a town in the lower Styria, in the jurisdiction of Gleichenberg, that the following very extraordinary circumstance lately took place there: One Charron, a wiand the young woman, transported to the most ex-travagant degree of superstition and fanaticism, imagined that she could have no hopes of falvation, un-less she purified herself by fire. She communicated her intention to her father, who being equally fuperstitious, approved of her delign, and even promifed to affift her in carrying it into execution. All Saints day was the time appointed for carrying this abominable project into effect. On the preceding evening, the girl placed feveral faggots in the oven.
When divine fervice began next day, the miferable felf-devoted victim fet fire to the faggots, and when the oven was red hot, with the affiltance of her father, the entered the fiery apartment, the door of which the father closed, and having stopped up the vacancies with clay tempered with water, placed a erucifix before the oven, and then went out of the house with every appearance of tranquillity and satis-faction. Having told some persons whom he met, that his daughter was doing pennance in the heated oven, they haftened to her affiltance; but, before their arrival, the body was entirely confumed. father was apprehended and conducted to Gleichen-berg, where he has undergone an examination. AMERICA.

Philadelphia, Od. 14. Thursday, a very intelligent gentleman, whose veracity may be relied on, arrived in this city from the Falls of Ohio, and Fort Pirt, and has communicated the following difagreeable intelligence, viz. That about the last of September, two men declared on oath before a magistrate, at Pittsburg, that they came from the Sha-wanese Town, and that just before they lest it, a party of that tribe came in with 14 scalps, amongst which were those of Mrs Moore and daughter, of Virginia; that 700 favages performed the war and faid they w nental furveyors, and then pay a visit to the settlement of Wheeland, about 100 miles below Pittsburg. In confequence of this information, Captain Hutchins ordered the furveyors into their, camp, judging it not prudent to perfift in running the ter ritorial lines until a general confultation should take place. The inhabitants also removed from the banks of the river, below Pittsburg, on grave and fish creeks. Our informant adds, this intelligence was corroborated by a faithful Indian from the Shawa-nese town, to Colonel Harmer, at the garrison at the mouth of the Miami.

General Clark, at the Falls of the Ohio, was collecting his troops, and making the necessary preparations for his expedition against the hostile tribes of Indians. Boston Ind. Chron. LONDON, Wednesday the Parliament, which stood prorogued to the 14th instant, was further prorogued until Tuefday the 23d of January next, then to meet for the dispatch of business.

It is the scheme of the interior Cabinet, that if

If Lord Hawkesbury is made Secretary of State, Mr Eden is to be made Chancellor of the Dutchy of Lancafter.

Lord Carlifle was at the levee at James's yesterday, and was reported as the successor to Lord Clarendon, late Joint Postmaster General.

His Excellency the Danish Ambassador has, it is faid, formally announced the intention of the Prince Royal of Denmark to visit this kingdom.

On Tuesday last arrived in town the Earl of Strathmore, accompanied by his fifters, Mary Maria Bowes Lyon, on a visit to their mother, who is still confined to her room, and much indisposed.

Yesterday, a meeting of the West India planters and merchants was held at the London Tavern, when it was agreed to prefent a memorial to the Minister, complaining of the injury they imagine the lowering the duties on brandres, in conformity to the stipulation of the commercial treaty, lately concluded with France, must do their interest, unless fome reduction is, at the same time, made in the duties on rums. A memorial, couched in strong terms, was produced, read, approved of, and ordered to be carried to the Minister by the gentlemen of the Committee. The meeting was a most respectable one; and the principal argument urged in proof of the absolute necessity for some alteration of the duties on rum, was, that if no reduction took place, the planters would not be able to continue making fugars.

The reports of the day are, that the vacant place of Postmaster General will be given to Lord Dudley and Ward, or to the Lords Chefterfield or Car-lifle; a better report would be, that another fucceffor to this useless office is not to be again appointed. Let the Minister recollect the credit that followed the reduction of Colonel Barre's pension, by appointing him to the Pells, he will then profit by experience, and add to his fame, and encrease his popularity, by a farther faying to his country of 2500l.

The late Earl of Clarendon was descended from the celebrated historian of that name, a minister of great integrity, and political talents, but who grew unpopular from his advising King Charles the II. to accept the sum of 400,000 I. from the French King for the sale of Dunkirk; a port which that minister thought Charles no longer able to retain from the narrow state of his revenues. This great statesman was in the year 1667 banished by the House of Commons, and retired to France, where he lived in a private manner. He furvived his banishment fix years; and employed his leifure chiefly in recing into order the history of the civil wars, for which he had before collected materials. The performance does great honour to his memory; and, except Whitelock's Memorials, is the most candid account of those times composed by any cotemporary

The following anecdote, of a diffinguished Law Lord, may be relied on. At a recent meeting of the Council, for the purpose of arranging the legal appointments occasioned by the retirement of Lord Mansfield; Mr Pitt proposed Sir Lloyd Kenyon to be his Lordship's successor, and Pepper Arden, Efq; to be Master of the Rolls. This arrangement, however, was over-ruled, and Mr Pitt's defigns were totally defeated, by the nervous eloquence of the Chancellor, whose fentiments on the above occation were thus expressed : - " I don't approve of the arrangements by G-d, and as to the man named to be Matter of the Rolls, I'll be d-d if I'll have fuch a fellow."

The fecession of Lady H. from the functimonions fet, arose from one of her Ladyship's Priests being fent on the embaffy of Conversion. It feems a beautiful young virgin, about nine months fince, in the vicinity of Grosvenor-square, was apparently dangerously ill, on which account the good old lady fent the pious Priest to administer ghostly comport to the almost expiring damsel. The Priest was so fascinated with the charms of the fair Sufanna, that his visits to her were uncommonly frequent-she recovered hafilly from her indisposition, and within these two days, hath produced a lively proof of the matins and vefpers the then received.

On Wednesday night some thieves broke into the Earl of Manssield's house at Caen Wood, and plundered feveral of the rooms and made their escape, although two watchmen have guarded the house ever fince the riots in 1780.

Friday last a curious cause came to be tried, before Lord Loughborough, wherein a Jew butcher was plantiff, in an action of damages fustained by his being prohibited from exercifing the trade of a butcher, by an order of the rulers of the fynagogue, on a charge by the defendant, of his felling meat to the Jews unstamped and improperly killed; (that is, killed agreeable to the Jewish laws). The plaintiff alledged that he bought the meat of a carcafe butcher, in Whitechapel, who generally killed for the Jews, whom he offered to bring as a witness: but the Jewish laws would not permit him to be examined before the rulers, on account of his being a Christian; on which account a charge having been made, and no proof of innocence being adduced, he was adjudged guilty, and fuffered accordingly. Serjeant Boston, who was Counsel for the plaintiff, insisted, that although the Jewish Laws prevented the man from Christian evidence to prove his innocence, yet as the plaintiff was a subject of this country, he was entitled to the prorection of its laws .-

Mr Mrgan, who was Counfel for the defendant, and rulers of the fynagogue, displayed a wonderful knowledge of the Jewish Laws and Customs, and infifted that the Government of this country tolerated the Jews to regulate their own police, especially with regard to matters of religion; the plaintiff having been convicted by those laws, could not feek redress from that Court.

A blame was imputed to the defendant, for having informed against the plaintiff; but Mr Morgan shewed, that by the Levitical law, expressed in the first and second verse of the fifth chapter of Leviticus, a person knowing of a sin being committed, and concealing his knowledge, was deemed guilty of the fin himfelf. Lord Loughboroug confessed himself entirely of Mr Morgan's opinion; and the plaintiff was nonfuited.

A letter from Paris gives a whimfical account of the Abbe Rive, late Librarian to the Duc de la Valiere. He has the reputation of being one of the most learned Bibliographers in Europe, and has hardly ceased writing from the 16th year to the prefent period of the 62d of his age. - But what is very fingular, is, that all his MSS. are upon playing cards, which are now 1,500,000 in number.

Tuefday morning early, the body of William Livingstone, Esq; in partnership with Mess. Gregory, Turnbull, and Co. merchants, King's Arms. gory, Turnbull, and Co. merchants, Island Yard, was found in the ditch between the Gardener's Ground and the road leading from Kent-Street turnpike to the castle at Newington. Mr Living-stone's horse was in the ditch likewise, and was taken to the Royal Exchange yesterday at noon to be owned, where it was discovered to whom it belonged, by means of a faddler's recognizing the faddle, which he had fent home to Mr Livingstone only on Saturday last. Mr Livingstone had dined at the house of Mr Turnbull, on Blackheath, and riding to town in the evening with fome gentlemen, parted with them about eleven o'clock, at the turnpike, at the end of the road where this unfortunare accident happened. It is imagined the horse took fright at fome object, and fuddenly started off the road into the ditch. Mr Livingstone's arm was broken. entangled in the bridle, when his body was found.

Bon Mot .- The leader of the band at Drurylane having taken great pains, to little purpose, in teaching Mr Kemble the air of Richard Cœur de Lion, at last, our of all patience, exclaimed, "Sir, "Sir, you murder the rime!"-" Well (replied "Kemble) that is better than to be eternally beating it as you do."

A MATRIMONIAL ANECDOTE. A woman of the town, and who had been in the lowest order of that unhappy rank of human beings, had a very great ambition to be a woman of quality. This was a very arduous talk; nevertheless, she succeeded in it by the following stratagem: Having a-mong her promiscuous lovers, a noble Lord of no very great talents or character, the fixed upon him as the ladder by which the was to afcend to greatness. By employing those arts which women so well know how to exert when they have an end to gain, the persuaded her noble visitor to take her into keeping. Her opportunities of working upon his affection now increased, and she did not fail to employ them; but still she had discernment sufficient to fee that her power was not equal to her object, and that his affection was not equal to the folly the withed bim to commit. Finding, therefore, that her fcheme would not fucceed in the common mode of attentions and careffes, the was refolved to have recourse to stratagem. She accordingly feigned herfelf extremely ill, and took to her bed; the fent for her noble friend to condole her, and as he really regarded her, he was affected at her fituation : at length the grew worfe, and her physical attendants, who were bribed for the purpose, assured Lord that it was simpossible the Lady could survive the The news affected his Lordship, and he drew nigh to her bed, to alk her if there was any thing in his power that could administer comfort to her in her present situation ? She faintly replied, there was indeed one thing, but she dared not ask itwhen he eagerly affured her in the most folema manner, that be it what it might, he would immediately grant it! She then faid, that if the could die his wife in reality, her last moments would be happy. The noble Lord did not quite like the proposal, but his word was given; the life of the poor woman was concluding, and his mind was deeply affected; he therefore confented: a clergyman was not far distant, and the ceremony was performed. The pitying bridegroom embraced his pale bride, as he thought, for the last time, and took his leave. The next morning he was terribly furprifed, disappointed, and enraged, at an account that his Lady was much better; in the evening the was out of danger, and the next day she was out of doors. In short, Lord received and acknowledged her as his wife, and the was not long in possession of that character, before the managed matters fo skilfully, and conducted herfelf with fo much art, as to make people of the first fashion, not only forget her original, and base profeshon, but court her acquaintance. Thirty years ago it was confidered as a privilege, by perfor rank and fortune, to gain admittance to her affemblies, balls, and entertainments. At last, however, the is gone where the woman of quality and the proflitute fleep together.

Extract of a letter from Calcutta, April 13. 1786. "The concessions granted to the French, by they have now a factory in the heart of Calcutta, and the privilege of trading to an advantage of fix per cent. less than our own private merchants, is most infamous, and cannot, in my opinion, fail to produce an impeachment in parliament. investment next year, you must expect only a reduced one. Jobs we have now in abundance, for corruption is fo far from being fcandalous, that it is become fashionable, even more so, if possible, than in the days of Hastings. All is bargain and sale.— Our Ambassador, Mr Anderson, has quitted Mada. jee Scindia's durbar abruptly, and retered to Agra in consequence of a discovery of intrigues with the French. Madajee is certainly meditating an attack on the Duab. General Carnac is gone to Tippoo's Court. Our discount is this day at the intolerable rate of twenty-three per cent."

"The Baron D'Eberstein, Chamberlain to the Margrave of Brandenburgh-Anspach, having recently discovered that the precious remains of the inmortal Gustavus Adolphus, King of Sweden, are deposited within the hereditary estates of his family at Gehoven, in Thuringia, has formed the noble refolution of erecting upon the fpor a fuperb monur ment, to the memory of that illustrious monarch, whom historians have fo justly celebrated as the guardian angel of Germany. We could not defery land of any fort; but quantities of ice floating as we advanced, we found it necessary to return. We then bore for the fouth as far as 65 degrees, 20 minuers, where we perceived the land we were in quest of. It appeared to be about fix miles from us, and as we fixed our eyes upon it, appeared to extend from fixteen to twenty miles. It was furrounded by great mountains, covered with fnow and ice, though we could perceive, in many parts, free from fnow, that it was covered ofs : having f not find more than one hundred fathoms depth.

We could find no opening by which we might approach the coast, and, as the the ice began to gather round the ship, it was necessary to keep at a greater distance. August 20th, North latitude 65 degrees, 50 minutes, we faw land again, the fame probably we had feen before, and making every effort to get near it, in spite of the immense quantities of ice, we were so successful as to reach within three miles of it, whence we perceived a space of 16 to 20 miles; but being forced to return, we failed south, and at 15 miles southward of the place we were first, we again approached within three miles of land. Here we observed a gulph of confiderable magnitude, which extended inland, fo that we could not discover where it ended. EDINBURGH.

Extrast of a letter from London, Dec. 15. of Postmaster-General will be offered to Lord Sydney, in order to introduce Lord Hawkesbury into the Cabinet, as one of his Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State; but it is also reported, that Lord Tharlow, the immediate patron of the former noble Lord, does not feem inclined to confent to it. Should this be the case, it is faid that the Marquis of Caermarthen, whose state of health threatens to diable him for some time from public business, will relign before the meeting of Parliament. This is whitpered to be what the Chancellor wishes, and what will most probably be the case. At any rate, Lord Thurlow is reported to be determined to have Lord Hawkelbury the enfuing fession in some often-fible situation in the Lords.

"You must not wonder at hearing so often of the commercial treaty with France. It is the constant topic of conversation here. Like the Irish propositions, every one is willing to think well of it. It is very certain, too, that a confiderable body of merchants and manufa Sturers have given it their approbation; and it is hardly possible to conceive a treaty that will not benefit some folks. Disinterested people fee it in a different point of view; and, indeed, this certainly may be fairly faid of the treaty, that it will be the means of circulating great quantities of goods, &c. into France, which will be really ufeful to the French, and without which they cannot conveniently do; and at the fame time, that it will be the occasion of our being overstocked with a variety of afticles from France, which we actually do not want, and could very well differnse with. hear that the Sun Fire Office has ordered twenty guineas to be distributed among those who were active in extinguishing the flames at the late great fire near the Parliament-house.

A correspondent remarks, that the late fire, which endangered the whole records of the kingdom, and the valuable library and manuscripts of the Advocates, originated in an infamous low brothel. The number of these dangerous nuisances every night en-danger much valuable property, and many valuable lives. Would it not, therefore, be good policy, and highly meritorious in the Magistrates, to root out such wretches, and oblige them to keep in a quarter by themselves, so that if a fire should happen, no

This day, the proclamation appointing the Parliament to meet on the 23d of January next, as for-merly inferted in this paper, was read at the Cross with the usual formalities.

Since Saturday last, the frost has been very intense here, and last night and this morning a good deal of fnow has fallen.

In a former paper, notice was taken of Mr Whitworth's plans for enlarging the harbour of Leith. Since these have been published, another plan has been presented to the Magistrates for the same purpose by a gentleman of Leith, which he thinks will answer equally well, and, at the same time, be done at a much smaller expense. We have no doubt the Magistrates will consider of the merits of these different plans with that attention and impartiality the importance of the subject demands; so as neither to throw away the public money with too great profufion; nor yet, by an ill-judged parfimony, do a work ba halves, which cannot fail, if properly executed, of being of the utmost public utility, as well as of advantage to the revenue of this city. We are now happy to hear, that the Magistrates have come to the refolution of immediately applying to Parliament for

HIGH COURT OF JUSTICIARY. LORD ADVOCATE against CHARLES and JAMES JAMIESON, and EUPHAM GRAHAM.

Yesterday morning, came on before the High Court of Justiciary, the trial of Charles and James Jamieson, and of Eupham Graham, their reputed mother, indicted at the inflance of his Majesty's Advocate for the crime of felonioully and theftuoufly abstracting the north mail, early on the morning of Thursday the 14th of September last, from the back yard of Duncan Donaldson, deputy post-ma-ster of Kinros, which contained the bags from A-berdeen, and other parts in the north of Scotland. The indictment was laid upon the common law of the country, as well as upon the following statutes, viz. an act made in the third session of the first parliament of King William and Queen Mary, holden at Edinburgh upon the 3d September 1690, chap-3. intituled, "An act against robbing the packet," which recites " the great advantage that doth arife to the public fervice, and private interest of com-merce, from the quick and fafe dispatch of letters and public orders, by the common poff, either from this kingdom, or to the same, from England or Ireland, orfromonepart of the kingdom to another; and that the robbing or feizing of the common post, mail, or packet, or any other expresses, is a notorious kind of robbery, and most prejudicial to the government and commerce of the kingdom: Therefore their Maje-flies, with advice and consent of the Estates of Parliament, do declare, That the robbing or feizing the mail or packet, or the letters and dispatches going or coming by the common post, or any other ex-presses as aforesaid, is robbery, and shall be punished with death and confiscation of moveables:" And by an act of the Parliament of Great Britain, made in the 5th year of his present Majesty, chap. 25. intit-" An act to alter certain rates of pollage, and to amend, explain, and enlarge feveral provisions, in an act made in the 9th year of the reign of Queen Anne, and in other acts relating to the revenue of the post-office," it is, inter alia, enacted, "That from and after the 10th day of October 1765, if any person or persons whatsoever shall rob any of his Majesty's mails, of any letter or letters, packet or packets, bag or mail of letters, although such robbery shall not appear, or be proved to be a taking from the person, or upon the King's highway, or to be a robbery committed in any dwelling-house, or any coach-house, stable, barn, or any our house be-longing to a dwelling-house; and although it should not appear that any person or persons were put in fear by such robbery; yet such offender or offenders, being thereof convicted as aforesaid, shall nevertheless respectively be deemed guitty of selony, and shall suffer death as a telon." And by another act made in the 7th year of his present Majesty, chap. 50. intitled, "An act for amending certain laws relating to the revenue of the post-office, and for granting rates of poltage for the conveyance of letters and packets between Great Britain and the Isle of Man. and within that ifland," it is, inter alia, enacled, That from and after the 1st day of November 1767, if any person or persons whatsoever shall rob any mail or mails; in which letters are sent or conveyed by the post, of any letter or letters, packet or packets, bag or mail of letters; or shall steal and take from or out of any fuch mail or mails, or from or out of any bag or bags of letters fent or conveyed by the post, or from or out of any post-office, or house or place for the receipt or delivery of letters or packets fent or to be fent by the poft, any letter or letters, packet or packets; although fuch robbery, ftealing, or taking, shall not appear or be proved to be a taking from the person, or upon the King's highway, or to be a robbery committed in any dwelf-line house, can be a taking to the case high shall be a taking to the case he was the shall be a taking to the case he was the shall be a taking the shall be ling-house, or any coach house, stable, barn, or any out-house belonging to a dwelling-house; and al-though it should not appear that any person or perfons were put in fear by fuch robbery, stealing, or taking; yet such offender or offenders, being thereof convicted as aforefaid, shall, nevertheless, respectively be deemed guilty of felony, and shall suffer death as a felon, without benefit of clergy."

The indistment then proceeds to recite, That Charles Jamieson, James Jamieson, and Eupham Graham, are all and each of them, or one or other of them, guilty aftors, or art and part, of the aforeone or other of them . In fo for as the mail from Aberdeen, and other parts in the north of Scotland, to Edinburgh, containing different bags of letters, having been regularly dispatched from the post-office at Aberdeen, in the county of Aberdeen, upon Tuefday the 12th day of September laft, in the year 1786; and the fame having been conveyed in the usual course, arrived on the morning of the day following at Montrole, in the county of Forfar, and from thence was forwarded with additional bags of letters on Wednesday the 13th day of the said month of September, and arrived fafely at the post-office of Perth, in the county of Perth, on the evening of the same day, where it received also the letters from thence, and was dispatched for the post office of Kinross, in the parish and county of Kinrofs, upon the evening of the faid Wednesday the 13th, under the care of Alexander Macdonald, servant or post-boy to Duncan Donald-fon, deputy postmaster of Kinrofs; who accordingly the mail at the inn or public house and post-house kept by his master in the neighbourhood of the town of Kinross, about twelve o'clock that fame night; and upon his arrival, having taken the mail from off his horse, and laid it down in the back vard of the inn, he went to the ftable to take care of his horse, and then into the house or inn to reecive his diffraction, as he was to praceed to the next stage fouthward with the mail; but upon his return from the house to the back-yard, where the mail had been lying, the fame was not to be found, having in the mean time been stolen and carried off by fome person or persons then unknown; and the fact is, that the said Charles Jamieson, James Jamieson, and Eupham Graham, having been at Kelty Bridge, a village about four or five miles southward of the town of Kinrofs, upon the afternoon of the faid 13th day of September last, did from thence proceed northward; and, about ten or eleven o'clock of the lame night, called at a public house in the town of Kinrofs, kept by Hector Monro, change-keeper there; where they drunk some liquor, and then set out from thence about or before 12 o'clock of the famernight, or early in the morning of Thurf-day, the 14th day of the faid month; and having immediately proceeded to the public house, or pole-house, kept by the faid Duncan Donaldson, a little way to the north of the town of Kinrols, they did then and there, all of them, or one or other of them, enter into the back-yard of the fold inn or post-house, and did felonioufly and theftuoufly fteal and abstract the faid mail from the place where it had been laid, with the feveral bags and packets of letters contained in it, which had been dispatched from different places as before mentioned; and having carried the fame acrofs the public road, into a field on the east fide thereof, they there cut up the mail with a sharp instrument, and took out the bags of letters; and did then or afterwards, in their progress thro the fields, open up the bags containing the different packets of letters; and from thence abilized the let ters themselves, or many of them, with a number of bills and bank-notes therein contained; which letters they then or afterwards broke open; and did all, or one or other of them, thence abstract a variety of the faid bank-notes and bills; particularly, a bill dated Wigan, the 20th July 1786, drawn by J Greenough, on Mess. William and Alexander Cooper, four days after date, indorfed by them to Alexander Aberdeen, and by him to John Brand, and by him to Thomas Steuart, Esq. Treasurer of the Bank of Scotland : And upon the fame night or morning. immediately after it was discovered that the main had been carried off, as aforefaid, several person having been diffratched to make fearch for the fame. fome letters were found lying in the field where the mail had been cut open, or near it, together with the mail itself, from whence the begs had been abstracted, and some of the opened bags; and, upon fearching farther, other parcels of letters were found lying in different parts of the faid fields, in the neighbourhood of Kintofs, together with two knives, one of them a sharp-pointed knife, shaped like a durk or dagger, with a remarkable haft, and the other a folding knife, with a rough hartshorn handle, which knives were the property of the faid Charles and James Jamiesons, and Eupham Graham, or one or other of them; and particularly, the faid first mentioned knife or durk, which Charles Jamieson had, in the afternoon of the 13th day of September, when at Kelty Bridge, employed David Horn cutler to sharp for him; and afterwards, when Charles and James Jamiesons were apprehended at Falkirk, in the county of Stirling, on the night of Saturday the 16th, or early in the morning of Sunday the 17th of September last, there was taken out of the pocket of James Jamieson, or one or other of them, a pair of large poling scissars, corresponding to the description of a pair of scissars which Charles and James Jamiesons, and Eupham Graham, had also employed the said David Horn to sharp for them at Kelky Bridge, upon the afternoon of the 13th day of Seprember; and there was found concealed in the bed where one of them, the faid Charles and James Jamiesons, was lying at the time of being apprehended as aforesaid, in the house of Jean Hutchifon relidenter in Falkirk, a pocket-book belonging to the faid Charles Jamieson, upon opening which, there were found in it the five bills first above deferibed, together with two guines notes of the Stir-

hing Banking Company, both dated 1ft June +784;

ther bag or pouch, containing two picklock-keys, the one being numbered 10, and the other 10 and together also with e parcel of horse hair; and there was found condealed in the same place, a lea-

the to l. Bank of England note before mentione! having been previously delivered by Charles Jamie-fon to James Bannerman coal hewer at Kennet. in the county of Clackmannan, in confequence of his having purchased a filver-watch from him the faid James Bannerman; and the draught for 120 l. on Kinnear and Sons, above described, having been dropped by Charles and James Jamieson, or one of them, on the fireet of Folkirk, was there found by Peter Thomson collier in Falkitk upon the morning of the 17th September last.

After the indictment had been read over to the pannels, and they had pled not guilty, Mr John Clerk, as Counsel for them, in a very long and ingentious speech, endeavoured to shew, that the libel, gentous speech, endeavoured to shew, that the sideh, as lead, was not relevant to infer the crime of robbery, which, by the law of Scotland, was necessary to constitute a capital offence. To illustrate this doctrine, Mr Clerk quoted a number of passages from Sir George Mackenzie's Criminal Law. With regard to the statutes sounded upon, Mr Clerk contended, that they as little applied to the case before the Court as the common law of the court. The the Court as the common law of the country. The two last, in particular, he insisted, applied to England folely, and could in no frape be meant to extend to this country; because the remedies therein contained, in case of a prosecution being brought upon false or frivolous grounds, could not be attained, agreeable to the laws of Scotland; and because thefe statutes contained technical expressions un-these statutes contained technical expressions unknown to the lawyers of this country.

Mr Solicitor General Dundas, after complimenting Mr Clerk for his very ingenious pleading, faid he should take up little time of the Court in reply. He laid his account to hear the arguments made use of by his learned friend respecting the law of Scotland. He himself had used something similar upon two former occasions, when he stood in a different situation from that in which he then did; but he had upon hoth occasions, here over-ruled by judges. had, upon both occasions, been over-ruled by judge-ments of the Court, and be had no doubt but the plea now fet up for the pannels, would meet with the same fate. With regard to the statutes, however, he thought it necessary to mention, that they were evidently meant to extend to Scotland as well as England, from this circumstance, that the first act of parliament which was passed establishing a General Post Office in Great Britain, and pointing one the regulations to be observed in that beneficial department, extended equally to Scotland as to Eng-land, and all future acts had a manifelt reference to land, and all future acts and this country.

The Lords, feriatim, delivered their opinions, and were pleafed, unanimoutly, to repel the objections, and to pronounce the usual interlocutor, finding the libel relevant to infer the pains of law, but allowing the pannels a proof of all facts and circumstances which might tend to exculpate them from the crime charged, or alleviate their guilt.

A jury being then chosen and sworn in, the proof on the part of the profecutor commenced, which on the part of the profecutor commenced, which being branched into fo many articles, as will be feen from the above indictment, and witnesses being examined as so each fact, was not concluded till eight mined as to each fact, was not concluded till eight o'clock at night; after which the Lord Advocate addressed the Jury on the part of the profecutor, and Mr Allan Macconnochie for the pannels. The Lord Justice Clerk then delivered his charge to the Jury, and appointed them to return their verdict this day at one o'clock, which they accordingly did, all in one voice, finding the pannel, Charles Jamieson guilty; by a great plurality of voices, finding James Jamieson guilty; and ananimously finding the libel not proven as to Eupham Graham. In confequence of which, the two former received sentence to be hanged at the usual place of execution, on Wednesday the 24th of January next. The latter Wednesday the 24th of January next. The latter was dismissed from the bar.
